MANCHESTER United's famous 'Big Lily' flag will be centre stage at Old Trafford on the 21st anniversary of its creation.

The club has given over its famous stadium for a day of celebration to commemorate the historic flag, which was born out of the conflict in Northern Ireland.

Revered amongst United's 670 million worldwide supporters, Big Lily has become an iconic symbol representing all things positive relating to Manchester United, friendship and passion through football.

It was created in 1999 by best friends Keith Norris and the late Martin 'Faceman' Cleary - two friends from opposite sides of the religious divide in Northern Ireland - to create harmony in their local Manchester United Supporters Club - and has been taken across the world including Australia, Brazil Japan and Germany.

The flag has appeared at two Champions League finals, was bridesmaid at Norris's wedding in Kyoto, attended George Best's funeral in Belfast and was a special guest at the 60th Anniversary function of the Malta Manchester United Supporters Club.

The name 'Lily' derives from the Easter lily and Orange lily which are symbolic of the Catholic and Protestant traditions in Ireland.

In spite of coming from different religious backgrounds, the two creators of 'Big Lily' were best friends and devoted Manchester United supporters.

Ireland, North and South, is a hotbed for Manchester United with 45 official supporters' clubs. Irishmen Patrick O'Connell, Johnny Carey, Noel Cantwell and Roy Keane have captained the team. Club legends including George Best, Sammy McIlroy, Norman Whiteside, Denis Irwin, Tony Dunne and Liam Whelan all hail from the Emerald Isle.

John Peden was the first Irishman signed by Newton Heath, precursor of Manchester United, in 1893. 63 players have followed suit, crossing the Irish sea to wear the famous red shirt of Manchester United, the latest, current under 23 star, Ethan Galbraith.

The club received great acclaim for displaying the 'Busby Babes' tribute flags, commemorating those who died as a result of the Munich air disaster in 1958, when they were displayed in the Stretford End at the match against Everton on February 6th - the 63rd anniversary of the crash which claimed 23 lives.

Several hundred devoted United fans travel with the tribute flags to the crash site in Trudering, Munich each year where they hold a commemoration service organised by Manchester Munich Memorial Foundation, a charity dedicated to keeping the memory of the Busby Babes alive.

Known as 'The Global Flag of Friendship', the flag has many famous friends - from footballers including Gary Neville, Raul Gonzalez and Cristiano Ronaldo - to dignitaries such as Dieter Reiter, Lord Mayor of Munich, Mark Magowan, Premier of Western Australia and former Irish Taoiseach, Bertie Ahern.

Now for the first time ever, the famous supporters' flag, which measures 60ft by 40ft, is being flown at Old Trafford alongside 50 'Wee Lily' tribute flags dedicated to the memory and illustrious history of heroes, legends and fans of the club.

They will proudly fly together as part of a documentary about the flag, which sees a number of famous figures contribute to the film.

Big Lily attracted worldwide media coverage when a mural dedicated to her was unveiled on Belfast's world-famous International Peace Wall in 2019.
