Galaxy Buds Live are Samsung Electronics' latest open-type earbuds with a one-of-a-kind aesthetic, leading audio quality bolstered by AKG's sound expertise and Active Noise Cancellation for a truly immersive earbud experience. What's more, Galaxy Buds Live feature a revolutionary ergonomic, tip-less design that conforms to the shape of your ear for all-day comfort.

But just how effectively does this convention-defying design hold up when used for some of the most dynamic and movement-heavy activities out there? Samsung Newsroom handed over pairs of Galaxy Buds Live to several movement experts to really put them to the test.

Taekwondo, a world-renowned Korean martial art, is a combative sport that differentiates itself from other martial art traditions with its emphasis on head-level kicks, jumping, spinning kicks and other fast movement techniques that really test the stamina of the competitor.

Given the sport's emphasis on powerful striking and kicking moves, it certainly stands as a good way to test the hold of the Galaxy Buds Live. Take a look at the video below to see whether or not the Galaxy Buds Live managed to pass the fifth installment of the Galaxy Buds Live challenge.

Stay tuned to Samsung Newsroom for the next installment in the Galaxy Buds Live challenge series.
